PRICE THREE CENTS

MURDER IS CONFESSED

FIVE EX-STATE OFFICIALS SUED

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—(By Associated Press)—Suits for accounting against five former state treasurers alleging shortages of approximately $2,500,000 were started today by Attorney General Edward J. Brundage. The suits cover the six terms preceding that of the present treasurer, Edward E. Miller, and are directed against all state treasurers who held office between 1909 and 1921. State Auditor Andrew Russell, who was treasurer twice during the period, is defendant in two suits.

The other former treasurers involved are: Governor Len Small, Lieutenant Governor Fred E. Sterling, William Ryan, Jr., and Edward E. Mitchell. The Small, Sterling and Russell suits were filed in the Sangamon circuit court at Springfield, their official residences. Suit against Ryan and Mitchell were to be filed today in Cook-co.

Bondsman of all the former treasurers were made defendants. Disclosures made thru the investigation of the state treasury which resulted in indictment of Governor Small, Lieutenant Governor Sterling and Vernon Curtis, banking associate of Governor Small, last July, furnished the evidence on which the civil suits were based, the attorney general's office announced.

Lieutenant Governor Sterling is defendant in a suit which alleges that $10,000,000 of state money alleged to have been used by Treasurer Len Small and the late Senator Edward C. Curtis for their own personal profit continued under the control of Curtis after Sterling, Small's successor, became treasurer.

ALLEGIANCE REFUSED BY SINN FEIN

LONDON.—(By Associated Press)—A chorus of vigorous protest against renewal of warfare in Ireland in the event the present peace negotiations collapse is raised by the morning newspapers, after the meeting yesterday of Premier Lloyd George and Sir James Craig, Ulster premier. In this conference the British cabinet chief informed Sir James that Sinn Fein Ireland had refused to swear allegiance to the crown in return for an Ulster agreement to enter an all-Ireland parliament. The gravity of the situation resulting from this refusal calls forth the references to a possible recurrence of hostilities.

The next definite development in the situation, it is believed, will not come before next Tuesday, when Sir James will report to his parliament.

WASHINGTON MEET WON'T END PARLEY

WASHINGTON.—(By Associated Press)—With the arms conference negotiations proceeding in an atmosphere of friendliness which delegates generally believe insures progress and accomplishment, increasing importance attached to its outcome today as a result of the informally expressed hopes of President Harding that the conference might lay the foundation for a continuing series of conferences with the aim of perpetuating a closer international accord. The president's plan, which has been offered only as a personal suggestion to some of the foreign delegates, who have generally approved of it, was an outstanding topic of discussion in conference circles as the delegations convened this morning for another committee session to take formal action on their virtual decision yesterday for gradual abolition of extra-territorial rights in China.

The president's informal proposal comes at a time of growing indication that further negotiations will be necessary to consummate the task begun here, a case in point already reached, being the virtual decision of the conference yesterday to send an international committee of jurists to investigate China's judicial system. Upon the report of this committee the governments concerned would base their judgment of the efficiency of the Chinese courts and determine their course in withdrawing the foreign tribunals within China, the gradual abolishment of which was agreed upon in principle yesterday.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Further defense testimony formed today's program in the manslaughter trial of Roscoe C. (Fatty) Arbuckle.

A delegation of witnesses from the Los Angeles motion picture colony, headed by Alice Lake, screen star, was in San Francisco today in expectation of taking the stand to testify in Arbuckle's behalf.

Judge Harold Louderback's court room was packed yesterday with persons who hoped to hear the defendant comedian testify and hundreds of others were turned back. No announcement has been made by the defense as to when Arbuckle would take the witness stand.

NIERENGARTEN IS SLAYER OF JOS. KERSHAW

The last vestige of mystery surrounding one of the most ghoulish murders in Allen-co criminal annals was dissipated Friday night, when Harold Nierengarten, 20, bell boy, confessed to the slaying of Joseph Scott Kershaw, war veteran, Sunday.

Wearied by four days of constant grilling; tired, fatigued and nerve racked by the constant strain of concealing his secret; beaten by the ever increasing array of evidence that was closing about him, the boy came thru and told how he treacherously shot Kershaw.

His confession was made in the Lima police station, after he had been brought from the Anguila-co jail late Friday afternoon. He told his story in the presence of Chief of Police M. F. Dawson; Sheriff Bob Ewing, Prosecutor Carl Timmermeister and Stenographer, Cliff Blair, of Wapakoneta.

PRISONER BREAKS DOWN

Edith Brown, cashier at the hotel where Nierengarten had formerly been employed, proved his undoing. She saw the boy on the interurban car on which he returned to Lima, after the crime.

When she identified him at the police station Friday night, his confession left him and his secret came out.

He was led away and shortly afterward made his confession.

"I'm tired and hungry and might as well talk," was the way he prefaced his story.

Nierengarten shot and killed Kershaw, war veteran of five battle fronts, in a Baltimore & Ohio box car Sunday, just after the train had passed thru Cridersville.

The motive for the crime, stated to the authorities, was because he had a feeling that he wanted to kill someone. The prisoner stated that he often was seized with a desire to kill.

Kershaw was standing at the open door on the east side of the car looking out. The other door was closed and nailed fast. Kershaw's back was toward Nierengarten who was standing in semi-darkness in the rear of the car.

Nierengarten drew his revolver and fired three shots in rapid succession. The stricken war veteran, gasped at the side of the door, his fingers failed to hold. His body slid to the floor.

Another bullet was sped into his brain. It was all over in a minute or so.

Beckman Electric Company Incorporated Near Close of Seventh Year--Interesting Story of Development From Modest Beginning to Present Large Business

MODERN EQUIPMENT THRUOUT WITH EXPERTS IN CHARGE

Entire Shop Operated By Its Own Electric Power Plant

NEW BOARD OF DIRECTORS

Present Building Has 12,000 Square Feet of Floor Space.

In less than seven years, the Beckman Electric Company has grown from one of the city's smallest industries to one of the largest and most important in its line.

About this truly remarkable industrial growth has woven a romance of progress and development that enfolds a true story worth while reading.

Back in the days of 1915, it was March first to be exact, Leo Beckman, now president and general manager of the Beckman Electric Company, was a partner in the Dice-Beckman company, doing house wiring and electric motor repairing. The shop, located at 130 South Central-ave, occupied a room, 17 by fifty feet, and even this place had room for the work and more to spare.

Later, however, by consistent application to business and the development of kindred lines, this room became too cramped to take care of the orders. Mr. Beckman bought his partner out in the fall of 1915, and the company became known as the Beckman Electric Company. About this time an addition was built, doubling the floor space and the company enlarged its field by doing storage battery work and all kinds of auto electric work.

In the spring of 1917, a larger room was taken at 124 South Central-ave with 2500 square feet of floor space, and three years later, the company moved into its present commodious quarters, 201-203 South Central-ave.

THE PRESENT HOME

The present home has a total of more than 14,000 square feet of floor space, including two floors. This building has been equipped with the most modern machinery and electrical apparatus, every device that would aid in the work now having its place here.

About the time of going into the new home, W. R. Holdridge became a member of the firm. He sold out his interests to Mr.

Beckman a few months ago, just previous to the reorganization of the Beckman Electric Company.

HOME OF THE BECKMAN ELECTRIC CO.

An open invitation is extended the public to visit this modern plant for automobile electric service. The above picture of the Beckman Electric building only begins to tell the story of the immensity of this concern, its whir of modern machinery, its intricate electrical equipment and wonderful battery department.

Incorporation and charter granted the Beckman Company August fourth of this year, at which time the company first began business as a corporation.

NEW DIRECTORS

With Mr. Beckman as president and general manager, these directors were elected by the stockholders: Harley Desenberg, R. L. Bates, Henry Neff and D. R. Cantieny.

Following is a personnel of the plant: Irvin Pfeister, general foreman and directly in charge of the electrical repair department; Arthur Desenberg, foreman of the battery repair department; and Carl Strobel in charge of the battery re-charging department. Thruout the building are expert electrical and repair men who have had years experience in their respective lines.

"We invite every automobile owner and driver, men and women, to a thorough inspection of our plant," said Mr. Beckman. One of the features that I believe would interest is our big power plant. We make all our own electricity for charging batteries, magnetos, etc., and even supplying the current for our own lights. We use our own electricity for testing generators and ignition systems."

One of the great reasons for the efficiency, speed and economy with which service is rendered the motorist is that the machinery is the most modern that could be bought today.

VISIT THRU PLANT

Going back thru the plant, one is first impressed by the efficiency of the parts department, where parts are carried in stock for all automobile electrical systems; then the electrical repair department, the battery charging department that will accommodate 150 batteries at a time, the great power plant, the storage room for cars undergoing electrical repairs, and at the rear, one finds all the necessary testing equipment and machinery for doing automobile electrical work.

SPECIALTY LINES

To show concretely how this concern has developed from a little "office shop" into a concern of real strength, one has merely to mention some of the lines for which the Beckman Electric Company now has authorized factory service, viz: Exide, Delco, Remy, Klaxon, Bosch, Splidort, Westinghouse, Gray, Davis, Atwater, Kept, Simms, Briggs & Stratton and Bijur electrical equipment. Also Zenith carburetors and Timkin, Hyatt and New Departure bearings.

The new organization has started out with a remarkably good business showing for the first three months, and, judging by the way orders for motor electrical and battery repair work are now deluging the work rooms, there will be plenty to keep the firm busy.

One of the things that will aid the company in its future development is the fact that it has taken on lines that are among the best known and most reliable that could be found.

EYES OF WALL-ST ON ARMS MEET

Financiers See Business Boost in Conference's Success

LABOR LITTLE INTERESTED

Large Part Knows Nothing About The Parley

(BY B. C. FORBES)

NEW YORK — (Special) — The newspapers have deluged us with enthusiastic comments on the Armament conference from statesmen at home and abroad, from financiers, from business leaders, from labor leaders, from ministers, from professors and even from armament-makers.

But what do those at the other end of society think of the proposals and the proceedings? Are they thinking about it at all.

I gave these instructions to an associate the other day: "Go out and talk about Washington conference to colored laborers, to longshoremen, street cleaners, east side housewives, immigrants, teamsters, elevator operators and perhaps young girls in factories and stores, and to the business world. Report exactly what each one says. Let the names, addresses and occupations of all the people you interview."

The results are not flattering to our standard of education. The percentage who knew absolutely nothing about anything going on at Washington is discouraging. A still larger number said that they had heard something about cutting down armaments and navies, but confessed to having no interest whatsoever in the subject.

Those who were aware of the Washington happenings expressed a wide variety of views. Most of the women, the mothers and housewives, were wholeheartedly in favor of disarmament, "anything to stop war." These women, some of them mothers of dead soldiers, all manifestly shrank from the thought of another war. As one woman expressed it, "it's the poor folks that suffer most, that gives up most."

Among the young girls questioned, few exhibited any interest.

What form did objections take? Briefly, they fell into two main groups:

- First: Distrust of Japan.
- Second: Distrust of England.

Several voiced, very forcibly, this thought: "If England's for it, America ought to be against it, for England's not for anything that would help America."

Others called Japan "all sorts of names, the gist of which was that Japan is sly as a fox, cocky, jealous of the United States, and eager to do to America what she did to Russia and China."

Another thing the interviews brought out was rather widespread feeling among these humble workers that it didn't matter a hoot what they are for or against, that their ideas and wishes don't weigh one iota with the prominent people who decide wars.

Brilliantly the proud boast of educated Americans that this land consists of over a hundred million sovereign "kings all" is not shared by many belonging to the so-called masses. It was apparent that they felt that they or their wishes don't count for much in the eyes of those shaping the destinies of the nation.

of those belonging to the humbler strata of society.

What of the latest views of financial and business men concerning the prospects for the success of the conference?

Briefly, there is a stronger and wider feeling today than there was before the conference opened that tangible, far-reaching results will be achieved.

The skepticism and cynicism voiced by many of the writers attending the conference and the disappointment they express over the "slowing down" of the proceedings, are not generally shared by financial and business men accustomed to conducting important deals. Their view is, rather, that events have moved astonishingly rapidly, and that the proceedings have followed distinctly more practical, specific lines than had been expected.

Wall-st's conception of the effects of what Secretary Hughes proposed, has undergone transformation. Wall-st's first thought was only of the adverse influence the stoppage of battleship building would have upon certain stocks. The speeches since delivered by Schwab and Gary, and the views expressed by many other financial and business leaders, have convinced the stock market that the success of the conference would, after all, have a beneficial effect upon the business world upon taxes, upon the money market and consequently upon securities.

Incidentally Japan's tactics when the talking stage is over and when brass tacks action is taken up, are awaited with eager interest, as not a few harbor doubts as to the actual willingness of Japan's militaristic governing class to pull in their horns.

REVIVE DRIVE FOR RED CROSS

Women Offer Aid; Two Day Campaign to Open Dec. 1

Indications were Saturday that the Allen-co Red Cross chapter will put across its proposed drive to obtain 10,000 new members in Lima and Allen-co, in an intensive subscription campaign to be started Thursday, December 1. Announcement to that effect was made by Calvin Selfridge, chairman, following a meeting Friday night of members of the executive committee and directors of the chapter.

Mrs. H. B. Poling, chairman of the nursing division, was rounding an organization into shape Saturday, which it is expected will obtain the desired new membership. Several additional meetings were scheduled for Saturday. A number of Lima women have come forward to help put the campaign over, it was announced.

"It is not because the people of Lima will not offer support to the movement, but because there has been no organization to put the membership drive across," Selfridge stated Saturday. "With the committee hard at work today and with the assured co-operation and help of a number of Lima women interested in the movement, we hope to secure the entire 10,000 new subscriptions in a two-day drive beginning Thursday," he said.

Shriders Seek $5,500 From W. F. and Zella Mann

The amount of $2,500 is asked in a suit filed in common pleas court late Friday by George W. Shriders against William F. Mann and Zella L. Mann, Jackson-twp residents. Shriders charges that the 52 acre farm in Jackson-twp he sold to the Manns has depreciated in value to that extent by failure of the Manns to erect a new dwelling house upon the land after the house thereon burned last January.

Shriders declared he consented they should receive the money from the insurance, with the understanding a new dwelling would be built. Instead, Shriders charges, they have converted the money to their own use and are leaving the county. He also asks judgment for $500 for valuable timber sold by them from the land.

They paid $790 on the $10,790 which they contracted on August 30, 1919, to pay for the land, it is averred.

DO FISH THINK?

A SALMON frequently travels 2000 miles to its favorite spawning grounds, says G. T. Halferty, member of a packing company in Seattle.

This makes you wonder: Can a fish think? Does it have memory and other forms of intelligence? If not, how does it remember the way back to its home 2000 miles away?

Indians claim that certain species of game fish—bass, salmon, trout, dore and muskellunge—decidedly have intelligence, that they become used to any artificial bait and warm the other fishes. This makes a change of baits necessary every few years.

Scientists laugh at that. They explain the 2000-mile trip of ocean salmon by attributing it to instinct—that peculiar natural force that produces involuntary action, without reasoning. Sit on a hot stove or tack. Instinct will guide you.

The salmon is said to have that most powerful eyesight known in animal life—about 100 times as powerful as human eyes. Its memory may be its photographic eyes, doubling over landmarks like a movie film run backwards.

A STRANGE thing has recently taken place in Canadian lakes. The salmon trout, an inhabitant of deep water, frequently caught only at a depth of 450 feet, has moved up to shallow waters for the fall spawning.

The eggs wouldn't hatch in the cold, deep waters. Does the salmon trout know it? No. When spawning season comes, nature develops yellow parasites—about a quarter of an inch long—on the salmon's sides.

To rub these parasites off, the fish seeks the gravel found only in shallow water. Eggs are squeezed out as the fish rubs over the gravel beds.

Science has not yet explained how the salmon trout knows that it can get rid of its living barnacles by rubbing gravel.

WHAT tells birds to fly south at this time of year? What tells squirrels to store nuts for the winter? What causes the field mouse to stock its larder for cold months?

What teaches the mechanics of construction to a dam-building beaver? Why does one beaver in every family sit on guard at the under-water entrance to the beaver house, with his tail in the water so that, if the dam breaks, he feels the water go down and can rouse the family and rush out for repairs?

Is it instinct? Then where does instinct end and the reasoning powers of human intelligence begin?

Man knows very little of natural laws, tho he is ruled inexorably by them.

ADVANCE OF JAPANESE

UNTIL 1854, Japan was isolated, refusing to have anything to do with other countries. Then Commodore Perry unlocked the doors. In 1860, Japan sent to Washington its first commercial and political delegation, in gaudy oriental robes.

President Buchanan, who received the delegation, would have heart failure if he could come to life and see the Japanese at the arms-limitation conference—silk hats, stenographers, battleships and other accoutrements of "civilization." Buchanan and Perry certainly started something.

PARABLE OF THE PLAYTHINGS

BY DR. WM. E. BARTON
THE daughter of the daughter of Keturah hath Cousins. For I and Keturah we have other grandchildren. But they live in other cities, so that they see each other only in the Good Old Summertime.

Now it came to pass on a day that the daughter of the daughter of Keturah and her little cousin, even the small son of my son, they played together, and for a time they were very happy. And so did it nearly all the time.

But on this day they had played for a time when there arose a mighty wall from the son of my son. And when their mothers entered, behold, the daughter of the daughter of Keturah had all the playthings, and she held them high above the head of her little cousin.

And when Keturah and the wife of my son inquired concerning the trouble, and the little lad made loud lamentation, the daughter of the daughter of Keturah spake with great consciousness of virtue. And she said: I am teaching my little cousin to be Unselfish.

That is one way to do it, and the way in which it hath been done from the days of Eve down, albeit Keturah knoweth not how to do it in that way.

And I smiled much at the way in which the daughter of the daughter of Keturah taught her cousin to be unselfish, and I hoped that that method of instruction would not become too popular. Nevertheless, there is something to be said for it.

When my friends who have automobiles take me driving, and I own more cars than any other man in town, then do I comfort myself and say,

I am not wholly to be censured for thus cultivating good graces in the lives of my neighbors. Too easily might they grow Aristocratic, and proud of their privilege. I am a most virtuous man in helping them cultivate their generous sentiments. They live the better and enjoy life the more by reason of the sharing of their good things, and I will assist them in the distribution. I am teaching my neighbors to be Unselfish.

THE FUTURE AIRSHIP

THE time probably never will come when mankind can dispense with surface vessels of the sea. It probably will be long, notwithstanding international agreements for naval disarmament, before the world can afford to scrap all its ships of war, the Cincinnati Enquirer states. But there is reason to believe that the readiness of the nations greatly to reduce naval forces at this time may have its foundation in the realization that ships of war, if not already too vulnerable to airplane attack, soon may become so.

The Washington conference, unless the American proposal is to be amended, does not contemplate any restriction of airplane development. It probably will not go into the field of chemistry, as applied to the development of destructive high explosives and poisonous gases—the logical weapons of the battle planes of the future. What then?

There is room for thought here, perhaps for apprehension. The war plane should easily become a nation's chief weapon of defense. It easily could become a nation's chief weapon of offense.

Airplanes already have crossed the Atlantic. They have crossed continents. It reasonably is certain that in the not distant future they will cross the Pacific. These feats accomplished, human genius has only to develop the machines to the point of battle efficiency and we are back again at the old starting point.

A British firm even now is building a very Titan of an airplane. It is intended for transatlantic flight. It will have a wing spread of 400 feet, a speed of 130 miles an hour and the capacity to carry 150 passengers. Genius and money will accomplish this work. Aviation is in its youth. It is foolish to say that such things cannot be done. Nothing in this age is impossible. If smaller aircraft can negotiate the ocean leagues so can larger and potentially dangerous craft. The new English craft is expected to make the passage from London to New York in 24 hours.

The United States and Britain are little likely ever to have another war. The two countries are closer together to-day than at any time during the past 150 years. Nevertheless, airplane development should receive equal encouragement and development here as in England. Airplanes can be rapidly constructed; compared with battleships their cost is negligible. England and America should maintain the same relative mastery in the air as on the sea. With France and Italy and Belgium and all other Caucasian lands, they must not permit a beautiful altruism to find them defenseless in face of a possible racial cataclysm or the surge of a Red revolt from the North.

At present America is behind all other powers in the matter of airplane development. America should waken up, or, some day, she may go up in the air in another sense of the phrase.
